

Erika Ballance graduated from the Masters of Forensic Mental Health Program on Tuesday 1 December, 2009 after holding one of the Justice Health foundation scholarships.

Erika was enthusiastic about the program and its application to her Justice Health role commenting:

“I am very grateful to have had the opportunity to study the Masters of Forensic Mental Health Program at UNSW. It certainly broadened my understanding of forensic law, legislation, crime & the criminal justice system. From the four electives chosen, I gained a much greater depth of learning and understanding, particularly of Child and Adolescent Studies, Substance Abuse and Aboriginal Forensic Mental Health modules. I would certainly recommend anyone wishing to give up a bit of their free time to undertake this program. It’s an opportunity not to be missed.
